

In The Loop

Issue: August 2026

Welcome to the August issue. It's the heart of summer. This month we're talking about your voice and how to use it, looking after wellbeing, including a topic we don't discuss enough, and the different ways brains work.

Whoever you are and wherever you've come from, you belong here at CoreEd.

Some tutors may be away over the summer, but the team is still here. Corrie, Ben, Priya and the Safety Guardian will point you to the useful bits.

01 · HAVE YOUR SAY

Your Voice, Your Say

Speaking up, and the survey that shapes CoreEd

12 August is International Youth Day, a good reminder that your generation's voice matters. Advocacy just means speaking up, for yourself and for others. At CoreEd, the simplest way to do that is the learner survey: we read every response, and it shapes what we do next. Not many of you have filled it in yet, so this is your nudge.

Looking After You This Summer

Including a conversation worth having

Keep the summer basics going: water, sleep, fresh air and a bit of a break. This month we are also putting a plainer light on one topic that carries needless stigma.

THIS MONTH'S FOCUS

Menopause: let's talk about it

Menopause is a natural stage of life, but it's still something people feel awkward raising. Its effects, on sleep, mood, focus and more, can show up at work and in study. Being understanding, whether it's you, a colleague or someone at home, makes a real difference. Support is out there: your GP, the NHS, and menopauseinfo.org are good places to start.

Feeling the pressure?

Summer can be a real mix, busy for some, quiet for others. Whatever you're juggling, be kind to yourself and take breaks. If things ever feel heavy, talk to your tutor, and Samaritans (116 123) and Shout (text SHOUT to 85258) are there any time.

03 • INCLUSION

How Brains Work Differently

Dyspraxia, dyscalculia and everyday support

This month we're raising awareness of dyspraxia and dyscalculia, two common ways of learning and thinking. Dyspraxia can affect coordination, organisation and planning; dyscalculia affects working with numbers. Neither has anything to do with how clever you are.

Small adjustments, big difference

A bit of extra time, clear step-by-step instructions, checklists, or a different way to show what you know can all help. What works is personal, so there's no one-size-fits-all.

Tell your tutor

If you find some things harder than they feel they should be, you're not alone, and it's worth a chat. Ask about reasonable adjustments. The conversation is confidential, and asking is always welcome.

04 · NEXT STEPS

Your Next Step

Keep your momentum going

You're already well into your apprenticeship, so the aim over summer is simple: keep your momentum up. If English or maths Functional Skills are still on your list, your tutor can talk you through what applies to you and plan the next steps together. Whatever stage you're at, they're here to help you move forward.

Safeguarding Team Update

Know who to turn to, support is here all summer

Safeguarding is everyone's responsibility, and the team is reachable over the summer break. Whether it's about your own wellbeing, someone else's safety, or a difficult time, please reach out. Speaking up early is always the right thing to do.

06 · SAFEGUARDING & PREVENT

Looking Out for One Another

Staying safe, online and off

Summer often means more time online. Part of keeping everyone safe is something called Prevent. Here's what it means, and who to talk to if something doesn't feel right.

Support, not suspicion

Prevent is part of safeguarding. It's about helping anyone who might be at risk of being pulled towards extremism or hateful views, the same way we'd help with any other worry. It isn't about getting anyone into trouble; it's about getting the right support early.

Think before you share

Not everything online is true or safe. If a post, message or account makes you uneasy, or pressures you to do or believe something, step back and talk to someone you trust. Keep your details private and be kind in the group chat.

Worried about something? You can speak to Jeannette or Airam (above), or contact the ACT Early support line on 0800 011 3764 or at actearly.uk. In an emergency, always call 999.

Final thoughts

Enjoy the rest of your summer. Keep your momentum going, look after yourselves and each other, and do have your say in the survey too.
